The Color Code of Mental Awareness http://frontsight.com/newsletter/html/08-color-code.html http://frontsight.com/newsletter/html/09-color-code-con.html
1	WHITE Being unaware and unprepared making the person an easy mark and victim. Criminals look for people in condition White. We must never be in condition white.
2	YELLOW We want to live in condition Yellow - relaxed but alert and aware of our environment at all times. Do not confuse this state of awareness with paranoia.
3	ORANGE The level of a specific, potential threat. In Condition Orange, we need to do two things: First, we must make some evasive maneuver which forces our opponent to show his hand. Second, we must start formulating a tactical plan in the event that the threat becomes real.
4	RED The threat becomes real. In Condition Red we must set a mental trigger and draw a line in the sand. Sequentially it works like this: You say to yourself, "I'm going to do X. If my opponent does Y, I'm doing Z." End of story. Decision is made. You draw the mental line in the sand, if your opponent steps over it, you know what to do and You Do It!
5	BLACK Condition Black is that point when our opponent trips our mental trigger and he crosses our mental line in the sand. We instantly activate our combat mindset which is best described as the mental willingness to inflict incapacitating damage to your opponent through overwhelming violence with no regard for your opponent's well being.
